

COLLECTOR, INTERIOR FURNISHER OR INVESTOR

The Antiques & Art Fair Luxembourg will be opening its doors from 27 to 30 January 2023 at Luxexpo The Box. For this 48th edition, some 90 exhibitors have already booked their attendance. These antiques dealers, gallery-owners and expert craftspeople will be coming from seven countries.

“Antiques & Art Fair is an essential meeting-place to supplement or embellish a collection, to surround yourself with furniture, paintings and top-quality objects, or simply to make investments for the future.

Jean-Pierre Defossé, the salon's organiser

One historical advantage of the Luxembourg fair is the range of what's on offer. Both in terms of the nationalities and the specialisms of the exhibitors, and in terms of the prices, which allow every visitor to find something to delight. The four objects we are showcasing here are proof of this.

A drawing of Gaston Lagaffe by André Franquin, whose prices are sky-rocketing, exhibited by Galerie Manuscripta will sit side by side with a rare Louis XIV period black lacquered double-sided flat desk which stands out for its rich ornamentation in gilt bronze and its provenance. In fact, the desk belonged to members of the Gage family, descendants of General Thomas Gage (1719-1787), Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in North America from 1763 to 1775. Viewings are at the Galerie Lux-Auction stand.

In the display case for the gemmologists Edelstein Prüflabor, collectors of Art Deco jewellery will be fascinated by a rare gold and platinum bracelet set with 165 diamonds, displayed right alongside a majestic head of an elephant by the artists Bernard et Arnaud Bessoud at the Boyrié gallery.

“You are sure to have your heart won over in this sort of museum where everything is for sale. And you can make your acquisitions in good conscience because – let's not forget – art and antiques are lasting and responsible purchases.

Morgan Gromy, CEO at Luxexpo The Box

He has triggered a transformation and a radical change of mission in the venue's conferences and exhibitions, manifested by considering environmental and social aspects in its events activities.

THREE EXCITING CONFERENCES, TO LEARN MORE

Thanks to its programme, the Antiques & Art Fair is also the opportunity to discover the exciting world of art and antiques, to improve your knowledge, or to discover new facets of history.

PATRICIA DE ZWAEF

Art historian & certified expert in 19th and 20th century art

FRIDAY 27 JANUARY 2023 AT 12.30

10 things to consider when buying a piece of art

AURORE MORISSE

Art dealer & buyer on the show « Affaire conclue »

SATURDAY 28 JANUARY 2023 AT 15.00

Art 3.0, when the market is exported to television

LAURE DORCHY

Art historian & independent expert specializing in the history of jewellery and silverware

SUNDAY 29 JANUARY 2023 AT 15.00

Jeanne Toussaint, the Belgian grande dame of Cartier – Creativity, the weapon for one woman's emancipation in a world of men

Three experts are on hand throughout the event to offer guidance and advice to potential purchasers. They will also be delighted to share their passion and to answer your questions, as will the expert craftspeople located at the entrance to the Fair.

INFORMATIONS AND THE TICKET OFFICE

ENTRY

9€

Free for persons under 15

Tickets are available on : antiquaires.lu

BRUNCH

40€

A delicious brunch buffet is also offered on the Sunday morning. Booking is recommended and can also be done on the website for the Fair

CONTACT

Paul Marceul, Chief Marketing Officer

@ paul.marceul@thebox.lu

+325 4399-1

Véronique Triffaux, Press officer - Hello TV

@ veronique@hellotv.lu

+352 661 577 557

LUXEXPO THE BOX

10, CIRCUIT DE LA FOIRE
INTERNATIONALE,
L-1347 LUXEMBOURG

www.antiquaires.lu
antiquaires.lu